why do babies come pdf

I may have missed something in the books, but I don't really understand why some babies come "early" and some come "late". Is it because the due date is just an estimate and no-one really knows when you got pregnant, despite which all babies take around the same time to grow? Or, is it because some babies stay inside for longer than other babies? Or, do we not know?

Why does my baby need more than one dose of vaccine? Most immunisations have to be given more than once to prepare your child's immunity. For example, three doses of DTaP/ IPV/Hib vaccine are needed to provide protection in babies. Booster doses are then given later in life to provide longer-term protection. How will I know when my baby's immunisations are due? Your doctor's surgery or ...
